Creating a Learning Environment That Encourages High Achievement, Curiosity, and Challenge. There are things students know and things they want to know. One of the tasks of the educator is to generate curiosity within the learner and then challenge the student to dig deep. Students are more motivated to engage in learning when the focus of learning relates to relevant issues, problem-solving, and creating products or presentations. Join Bobb Darnell as he presents practical strategies that enrich the learning environment and encourage higher achievement. Handouts will be provided.

Dr. Darnell is an internationally known speaker who has delivered keynote presentations and conducted workshops for educators at all grade levels and for corporations. Bobb's high-energy workshops are filled with "edutainment" and practical ideas that have resulted from blending research and tested practice. Teachers and administrators can easily sense his enthusiasm for continuous improvement, job satisfaction, lifelong learning, and organizational excellence. He is truly committed to helping teachers build high performance classrooms and building strong parental support for schools and learning.

Parental Involvement — February 12, 2013 a.m.

Rita F. Pierson, Ed.D
February 12, 2013
A.M.

Understanding Poverty and Working with Parents. Understanding the mindsets of different economic classes can help teachers become far more effective in communicating with the parents of their students. Economic realities create ways of thinking and behaving. In this morning workshop Rita will provide practical ideas about how to relate to parents from different economic backgrounds, improving relationships with parents through communication and conflict-resolution strategies, and encouraging parents from various backgrounds to be more involved. Handouts will be provided.

Rita Pierson, Ed. D. of Houston, Texas, has presented all over the country since 1997. As an educator, she has served in numerous roles, including teacher, counselor, assistant principal, testing coordinator, and consultant. Rita also developed and implemented a school/community program for a large urban elementary school.
