District alum Yara Luna named Trinity Prize nominee

No wonder this year's representative for one of Bexar County's most prestigious honors feels right at home in an SAISD classroom. Not only is De Zavala ES 3rd-grade Gifted and Talented teacher Yara Luna a District alum, mom Lucia Garza is a 42-year veteran SAISD educator and her primary source of inspiration.

"I was blessed with a mother, a teacher, who ensured that I not only received a traditional education but also learned outside of the classroom with others," she wrote for her nomination.

Her appreciation for her mother's role as a caring teacher and mentor are attributes Luna strives to exemplify as an educator. These qualities also were among the reasons principal Joseph Cerna nominated her for the 2013 Trinity (University) Prize for Excellence in Teaching, to be announced this spring.

"Ms. Luna provides her current and former students with a great amount of support and motivation in their educational experiences," he wrote in his nomination letter, adding: "It is without question that Ms. Luna has impacted hundreds of students' lives in a positive manner and will continue to do so without fail. Her nomination for the Trinity Prize for Excellence in Teaching is well deserved and carries with it my full support."

In addition to the example set by her mother, Luna's desire to teach evolved from her experiences at the Child Protective Services legal department, where she worked after obtaining alternative teaching in 2004.

After obtaining alternative teaching certification, Luna began substituting at De Zavala in September 2006 and was hired full-time in January 2007. Besides 3rd grade, she also has taught at the 2nd- and 4th-grade levels.

"I realize that teaching is a calling and privilege as well an enormous responsibility," she wrote as part of her nomination.

For her, that responsibility goes far beyond the school day and extends to mentoring students and making home visits to encourage parent involvement.

Neither does her commitment end when they leave her classroom. Because Luna believes that "once they are my student they are always my student," she continues to follow their progress.

This includes mentoring those she helped achieve admittance into the Young Women's Leadership Academy. She also feels a particular kinship for seniors at her alma mater, Brackenridge HS, whom she assists in preparing for college, even volunteering to chauffeur and chaperone students on out-of-state campus visits.

Her other commitments include: serving on the District Advisory Committee for curriculum; co-coordinating De Zavala's student newspaper; Positive Behavior Intervention Support efforts; University Interscholastic League competition; Junior Achievement partnership with the San Antonio Business Hall of Fame; PTA leadership, the University of Texas Explore UT field trip, founder/sponsor of the Taste Buds culinary club, recruiting at District job fairs, and endeavors promoting improved attendance.

As an SAISD student, Luna attended Woodlawn ES, and studied German through the multilingual magnet programs at Talulla MS and Brackenridge. This helped prepare for her spending her junior year in Germany as a foreign exchange student.

She received a full scholarship for the trip through the efforts of her teacher, Ulrike Schulz. Luna returned to Germany as a college student as part of the Middlebury Study Abroad Program, and later continued her higher education at UTSA, where she earned her master's degree in 2010.

Besides her mom and family members, Luna credits her success to Cerna, Schulz and other District educators including Margaret Mireles - who taught 5th-grade at Woodlawn prior to serving as an SAISD School Board president - and wishes to share her honor with them all.

"I have been blessed with a loving family, rich educational experiences and many wonderful teachers," she said.

"I may be the one who is receiving this recognition and award but I could not and have not been on this journey alone."

Art champ

Grand champion steers weren’t the only ones bringing in top dollar at auction this rodeo season. Highlands HS senior Betty Clay - competing in the San Antonio Stock Show & Rodeo’s Western Art Contest - took in a total of $22,000 for “Yum Flowers.” Her depiction of a steer angling its head through bared wire for a tasty bite of bouquet placed second of 25 entries. Betty was one of only two San Antonio artists who qualified (and the first ever from SAISD) for this annual event held to help high school students raise money for college. She also was among a select group of contestants invited to attend a three-week Western Art Academy program at Schreiner University. While this was Betty’s first rodeo triumph, she’s no novice in the winner’s circle. The talented teen has won the SAISD Holiday Card Art Contest for two consecutive years. Joining her at the easel (right) is teacher Annette Hoffman.

For more handy tips, including STF training and improving workplace safety.

Don’t be tripped up by those hazardous STFs

While modern day office equipment such as calculators, computers, copiers, fax machines, printers and paper shredders are tremendous assets in helping us do our jobs more efficiently, there is a downside to these conveniences: namely STFs, aka slips, trips and falls.

Did you know STFs are the leading cause of accidents in SAISD? But no need to let them be your downfall. Check out the following tips to make your work environment safer.

Keep equipment and furniture under control

STFs and other potential dangers such as electric shock and fires can be prevented by:

• Properly grounding electrical equipment and keeping its environment dry.
• Clearing pathways of wires, cords, clutter and open file cabinet and desk drawers. Not only can open drawers be tripped over or walked into (potentially resulting in cuts and bruises) they can cause cabinets to tip over - especially when the top drawer is fuller than those on the bottom.
• Keep equipment and furniture under control.
• Use a step stool or ladder for reaching high areas. Standing on a chair creates an unnecessary hazard that could cause a serious fall. Certain chairs will tip over if leaned on, and many are not designed to hold the weight of a standing person.

Take the time to learn to lift properly and get help when the load is too large or too heavy for you. … and watch out!

Never carry an object that can block the view of the path in front of you. This can cause a serious collision or accident. Likewise, approach doors that might swing toward collision or accident.

Never lift a load too heavy to carry. This can cause not only STFs but back and other injuries as well, which could result in permanent disability and lost wages if you are not able to work.

Be safe and enjoy your holiday!

Now under construction
Dust is flying throughout the District as construction projects are under way to bring a variety of anticipated amenities to benefit SAISD students, staff and the community. These include a $93,000 basketball court and walking trail (adjacent photo) for Harris MS. The campus is one of five in the District to get a sports court through a total of nearly $207,000 from the city of San Antonio on behalf of Metro Health. The funding was courtesy of the Communities Putting Prevention to Work federal grant the city received to help fight obesity. When completed, the sports courts will be open to the public after school and on weekends. Other recipients are Lowell, Rhodes and Rogers middle schools.

Battle of the brains celebrants
Coming home with some coveted hardware earned at the state Academic Decathlon contest are these Sam Houston HS students. Competing in the small schools category, Team Hurricanes placed second in Super Quiz and also won two first- and three third-place medals in individual categories. Sam Houston was one of a trio of SAISD high schools that qualified for state. In the medium schools category, an Edison student took gold in math. The Hurricane coaches are Kathleen Sadler (left) and (not shown) Veronica Marines.

Outstanding athletes
It’s been another stellar week for SAISD high school athletes including the following: 1. Headed to the next round of the playoffs is the Sam Houston boys basketball team. The Hurricanes qualified for the 3A regional quarterfinals in the Regional tournament this weekend in Corpus Christi by knocking off Fredericksburg 90-63 in the playoff. Sporting a new ‘do as a show of support is (foreground, right) principal Miguel Elizondo. The Voks bowed out to Alamo Heights in the regional quarterfinals.

Mastering the martial arts
Getting a preview of some of the honors that might someday be theirs if they continue karate are these Cameron ES students. To inspire them, their coach Charles M. Hornbeak shared certificates representing some of his own highlights. This includes his recent appointment as chief examiner for the black belt exam. In addition to teaching PE at Cameron and coaching sports after school at M.L. King Academy, the third-degree black belt provides martial arts instruction at sessions outside SAISD whose attendees include other District students as well. After a sports career that included semi-pro soccer, the product of SAISD returned home to teach, where he is a 29-year veteran employee. Hornbeak is a Fox Tech HS graduate and also went to Bowden ES and the former Emerson MS.
