More than 2,000 4th graders visit Burbank farm

Elementary students from across the district have visited the Burbank Agricultural Sciences Farm this week for the return of the school's Ag in the City program, the first time the event has taken place since 2019, before the COVID-19 pandemic. "This year we said let's bring it back and let's bring it back with a bang, so we invited all elementary across the district," Shelby Parker, Agriculture Science Director at Burbank High School, said. The fourth-grade students visited in six groups over two days (Nov. 14 and 16), touring the farm facilities, engaging with the animals, planting seeds, making simple recipes, and learning about careers and educational opportunities in agriculture.

SAISD to have representation at Macy's Parade

Highlands junior Benjamin Mendez has a lot to be thankful for this year. The trombone player in the Mighty Owl marching band is on his way to New York City tomorrow to begin rehearsals for the Macy's Great American Marching Band, an All-Star band with top musicians from all over the country tapped to march in the Macy's Day Parade on Thanksgiving. Mendez is the first musician from SAISD to have earned this distinction. What makes it even sweeter is that he was supported by the SAISD Familia, including some generous Highlands alumni, to get there.

Travis senior shares culture with community

Dakota Osife has spent most of her life proudly and publicly sharing her Native American heritage through dance and other cultural activities. The Travis Early College High School senior is an enrolled member of the Navajo/Diné Nation, and a committee member of the local organization United San Antonio Powwow. Osife, a College Board Class of 2023 National Indigenous Recognition Awardee, says she tries to bring Native culture to the forefront of discussion. "There's a misconception that Native Americans are not here anymore, and that Native Americans don't exist anywhere except Arizona and Oklahoma," she said. "A lot of families move out for more opportunity. We are just like everyone else. We can all look at the culture and appreciate it together."

Jefferson students create art for SAMministries

Just in time for Thanksgiving, students in Louie Gutierrez's ceramics class at Jefferson High School used their talents to help fight hunger, especially in those experiencing homelessness. They partnered with SAMministries for the 23rd annual Empty Bowls Event, creating 70 bowls that in turn generated $2,100 to help provide food and shelter for those experiencing homelessness in San Antonio. "Making the bowls really made me happy because it was going to be a good cause, and I like to give back to my community," Syrus Cardenas, a ceramics student, said. "The fact that the bowls were sold for $30 is a great feeling, even though that people would actually buy my work for that much. These bowls maybe even changed someone's life knowing that they are loved."

H-E-B, Unilever fund grants on Texas Recycles Day

In partnership with Unilever and H-E-B, the SAISD Foundation held a celebration for Texas Recycles Day Wednesday at Cotton Academy (pictured), featuring a ribbon-cutting ceremony for the school's new outdoor recreation area, and the celebration for the top elementary schools in the Foundation's recycling contest this fall. Supported by an in-store fundraising campaign and donations from both Unilever and H-E-B, the SAISD Foundation awarded 20 local elementary schools and academies with grants totaling $40,000 as recognition for their recycling efforts. Top recycling campuses included first place Green Elementary, second place Mission Academy, and third place Japhet Academy, who won a bonus grant for collecting the most pounds of recyclable materials. Grants provided to the schools, as well as the improvement of the outdoor recreation area at Cotton — to include seating, outdoor learning spaces, and a share structure — were funded through the partnership between Unilever and H-E-B.

Community gathers to celebrate distinguished alumni

CLOSING SHOTS

Nov. 11 marked Veterans Day, and campuses across the district took the opportunity to honor those in the community who have sacrificed so much with their service. Recognitions included campus ceremonies and appreciation meals as well as participation in city-wide events recognizing all those who serve and have served in the U.S. Armed Forces. Pictured are: Lanier High School, Collins Garden Elementary, Forbes Elementary, Crockett Academy, Highland Hills Elementary, Harris Middle School, Young Women's Leadership Academy, and Mission Academy.
